The Value of a Good System

By John C. Maxwell

Almost nightly, the fate of the American health care system headlines the evening news. With costly inefficiencies plaguing the system, employers and workers alike have felt the pain of skyrocketing premiums. Politicians on opposite ends of the political spectrum disagree on the best policies for the future, but there seems to be consensus that the system isn't working well.

I'm not advocating a position in the health care debate. I simply want to point out the headaches caused when we don't have good systems. What's true nationally applies individually as well. Broken systems lead to disorganization, confusion, and chaos whereas smooth systems allow us to move quickly and efficiently.

The reason for this lesson is to help you understand the importance of developing good systems in your personal and professional leadership. The exact systems that work for me may not pertain to you. It's up to you to find the systems that will benefit you the most. Yet, regardless of what your systems look like, you would be wise to design them if you intend to grow in influence.

What Is a System?

A system is simply your way of getting things done. Systems aren't one-time acts; they're habits that you do weekly or even daily. They're the mechanics of leadership, and over time, they dictate the extent of your effectiveness.

The Value of Systems

1. They Help Us Manage Time

As a young leader, a heavier workload and increasing demands on my time forced me to learn how to get things done quickly. I developed systems to squeeze as much productivity as possible into my day. I couldn't afford to move slowly.

As Peter Drucker wrote, "Everything requires time. It is the one truly universal condition. All work takes place in time and uses up time. Yet most people take for granted, this unique, irreplaceable, and necessary resource. Nothing else, perhaps, distinguishes effective executives as much as their tender loving care of time."

2. They Help Us Conserve Energy

When we have good systems in life, we don't waste energy. Do you know the number one waster of time? Looking for things that are lost. A study by Office World News found that the average executive squanders 150 hours each year looking for misplaced files.

As I worked on this lesson, I laughed because I knew it would bring up a few of my idiosyncrasies. For example, when I went to get my glasses the last time, I ordered six pairs—one to put at each of my favorite reading places. I don't have to carry a pair around with me, and when I sit down they're always convenient. It may seem like a silly system, but I never lose time rummaging around for a pair of reading glasses.

3. They Help Us to Multiply Creativity

When I was first married, my wife and I lived in south Indiana, and we didn't have any money. Margaret taught kindergarten, and I was a pastor making $80 per week. Margaret would ask me to mow the lawn, and I would get irritated because we didn't have money to hire someone else to tend to the lawn. There's nothing wrong with mowing, but I had lots of other priorities, and mowing didn't crack my top ten. So, eventually we bought a goat. He grazed on the grass, and I saved time!

Developing systems to handle the trivia of life frees you up to be creative. By automating repetitive tasks, you're able to focus mental energy on top priorities.

4. They Help Us to Maximize Progress

Systems help us to move forward, to go as far as we possibly can. They enable us to work faster, smarter, and more strategically. A good system eliminates waste, while it also anticipates and removes obstacles.

FROM THE CHIEF

It's been a rough month for my family and me. I would like to take this opportunity to thank each of you for the kind words, cards and prayers for my Mom and Dad. The cards are a constant source of comfort, as are the memories of the phone calls and personal messages I have received from each of you. It's times like these when you find you have outstanding friends who are willing to share your pain and hold your hand through the rough parts in life. Thanks for being there.

My Mom was a true servant; she taught me that there is really no other reason to be on this earth than to serve those around you. She lived her life to serve, and as far as I am concerned, she still had work to do when she left. For those of you who didn't know my Mom, she was the Director of North East Emergency Distribution (NEED) in Hurst. Over the years, that organization has served thousands of people who needed food, clothing, school supplies, help with their utility bills, help paying their rent or just a compassionate ear to talk to or someone to pray with. She had assembled a network of volunteers who gave hours, days and years to serve those around them. As you can tell, I think she was a very special person.

I also think you are very special people. You each come to this organization with a sense of purpose to serve. You serve this department, the community and each other with a spirit that can never be bottled or sold. You come with an open heart, not to serve yourselves, not to seek power for the sake of holding power; you come because you live to serve others. I cannot think of a greater compliment than to be called a servant. That is a badge of honor for me, and I do believe it is for you too. Servants don't have the luxury of choosing who are when they serve, they serve when there is a need.

I thank each of you for your Servant's Heart, I cherish each minute you give us. In the end, you cannot help another person without first helping yourself. As I have struggled with the change this event has caused, the one thing that will never change is my intense desire to serve and my gratitude that you allow me to serve with you.

Your Servant,
Mike

To get the most out of systems, you have to make them a lifestyle not a one-off deal. They must become ingrained in your routine. Systems only benefit you when you stick to them.

ALUMNI CORNER

Spotlight on Tim Stinneford

Interviewed by Jerrie Keller and Faye Stinneford

Tim is a graduate of CPA Class 14 and was born in Brooklyn, New York on July 22nd. Tim and his wife Faye celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary this past September. Way to go guys. He has one daughter who is also a member of the ECPAAA, Julie Ratliff. He also has one very special grandson named Dylan. Tim has one brother and two sisters. His siblings and mother all reside in New Jersey.

As many of you may know, Tim is the current Mayor Pro tem for the City of Eules. He has lived in Eules for a little over 8 years.

Some of his favorite things are Golf, Golf and More Golf. And when he's not golfing he enjoys reading, going to the movies and being a part of the City Council. His all time favorite book is "Clear and Present Danger". He is also a big fan of Louis Lamour books. His favorite place to travel is Hawaii, but would also like to go to Alaska.

When we asked Tim what made him join the Alumni Association he advised he had belonged to the CPA in Midwest City, Oklahoma. His favorite thing about the class was the firing range. I'm not sure it's a good idea to give a Yankee a gun in the South, but he was closely guarded, and besides Faye can outshoot him. His favorite thing about the Alumni Association is the COP ride outs with his ever present Posse. We asked him what he would like the ECPAAA members to know about him and he replied, "Nothing". But he really meant, vote early, vote often. As everyone probably knows, if you ever want to know anything about him just ask, after all he is his favorite subject.

If you don't get a chance to introduce yourself to Tim at a meeting you can always catch him twice a month at City Council. You'll be glad you did.

From the President – Rose-Marie Stevens

Some of you may have heard the story of how a member of the Secret Service came knocking on my door. No, he wasn't looking for me; he was looking for information. Anyway, after I answered his questions, I asked him to come speak to our group. He agreed.

Special Agent John Cain is scheduled to meet with us at our October meeting. At the Board's request, I asked him to talk about their current initiatives to give us an idea of what they are focusing on now. He said that the presentation would be better if the audience asked questions; I assured him there would be plenty of questions. He will be assisted by Special Agent Jeff Shaffer.

Weather permitting; he plans to bring one of their armored cars, like the ones they use to protect the President and other dignitaries. I learned that when they purchase one of these vehicles, a Secret Service Agent stays with it while it is being fitted. That car gets more protection than I do, but I'm not jealous.

CPAANT - October 3, 2009 Arlington, Texas By Geri Sorg

The CPAANT meeting was held in Arlington on October 3rd; the same day as our Euless PD Open House (if only I could be 2 places at the same time....). We had 14 cities represented and 47 attended the meeting.

The meeting was held at the new South Arlington Police Service Center and we were welcomed by Deputy Chief James Hawthorne. Our speaker was Arlington's Homicide Detective Tommy Le Noir; his presentation was well received by all who heard him.

When I met him, I enjoyed talking to him after he assured me I was in no trouble, and I hope you'll enjoy his visit to ECPAAA.

On another topic, I was forced to miss the Open House, but I'm sure it was successful. Thank you for being there!

Child Abduction Response Team Mock Exercise

By Sr. Cpl. Kim K. Althouse #271

On Thursday, October 1, 2009, the Euless Police Department and eleven surrounding agencies participated in a mock child abduction exercise. The mock exercise was presented to the staff of Fox Valley in order to obtain accreditation. As part of the exercise, it was necessary to call out volunteers to participate. The first round of calls was made and between Euless and the other cities we exceeded our goal of 25 volunteers. We actually had 47 volunteers show and it was not necessary to make any further calls outs. I am very proud of each and every one of you. We did get the accreditation and the staff of Fox Valley believed our Northeast Tarrant County CART team is the best in the nation. Thanks to Al, Sue and Betty for making the calls and thanks to everyone who showed support for this invaluable training.
